Photosynthesis: Nature’s way of making solar fuel

1. Sunlight is absorbed by plants, algae and certain bacteria.

2. This solar energy drives a complex process in which water and carbon dioxide are converted to oxygen and carbohydrates or other ‘fuels’.